

Call for Proposals Daoism and the Human Experience

Series Editor

David Chai, Chinese University of Hong Kong

Editorial Advisory Board

Zongqi Cai, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, USA

Bret Davis, Loyola University Maryland, USA

Chris Fraser, University of Toronto, Canada

Thomas Michael, Beijing Normal University, China

Eric S. Nelson, Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, Hong Kong

Franklin Perkins, University of Hawaii, USA

Lisa Raphals, University of California, Riverside, USA

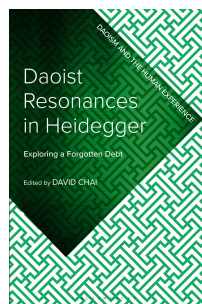

James Sellmann, University of Guam, USA

Robin Wang, Loyola Marymount University, USA

Zhihua Yao, Chinese University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong

Daoism and the Human Experience is currently accepting proposals for monographs and edited collections that focus on Daoist thought, irrespective of historical period, as well as those that explore Daoism within the broader context of China, East Asia, continental Europe, India, Africa, the Americas, and the Islamic world. The series offers a platform to explore, question, and learn about the ways Daoism has, or may contribute to our understanding of the philosophical, religious, literary, aesthetic, medicinal, scientific, and ecological aspects of human existence. Daoism and the Human Experience seeks book proposals that will both deepen our understanding of Daoism and the world around us.

The series launches in June 2022 with Daoist Resonances in Heidegger

Notes of interest, including your name, affiliation, CV and information about the work you wish to submit should be sent to the Series Editor: davidchai@cuhk.edu.hk

For monographs proposals we require a proposal form and two sample chapters; for edited volumes, please include three sample chapters.